So, here it is. 747, and all the side by sides in our TVs have come to life. Everybody's home from work. So they're all out driving them in the last few minutes of daylight. I've been listening to them probably for about 30 minutes. We haven't really, really even any of the RTV. I mean things have been relative actually surprisingly quiet past couple days. We did have Mr hop in his and blow the living out of his engine he had to be read. He had to be well red line I mean he had to literally topped out that engine. Well redlining. He did that earlier this morning. So, MIT is worse I mean I felt so sorry for that engine. the living out of his engine. It's morning, and then later on, you know, then of course late last we had every you know everybody got off at the same time, and all the haul them tore off that was And so really I've been anything lately because a I forgot to continually forget to get the SD in the camera and be, we kind of up real we kind of been giving up. And, you know, it's ridiculous. You know, it's not you know, I understand a lot, we're gonna put them and deal with but I mean, does Yeah, I didn't, I didn't work my off to live on the limit the end of some race of disguise. And here you see the side by side so I'm gonna see if I can get a photo of this because sells me it's coming this way.
